

Besqab develops more residential apartments at Invernesshöjden in Danderyd

Besqab AB's (publ) ("Besqab") CEO Magnus Andersson has initiated another phase of new residential apartments in the development project Invernesshöjden in Danderyd. Together with Hanna Bocander, Chairman of the Municipal Board in Danderyd, and NCC's Production Manager Sara Albrecht, the last support layer for the basement floor was put in place.

The project Invernesshöjden started in 2018 and now the third phase starts. Earlier stages include both condominiums and rental properties and when the entire area is ready, approximately 480 new homes, spread over four stages, have been added to the Inverness area in Danderyd.

Magnus Andersson, CEO Besqab says:

"It is a gratifying that today we can mark the start of another phase of residential apartments here in the project Invernesshöjden. The homes are in line with Besqab's sustainability goals with, among other things, careful sorting of construction waste, the use of green concrete and certification according to the Nordic Swan Ecolabel, as proof that we deliver healthy homes."

Hanna Bocander, Chairman of the Municipal Board in Danderyd says:

"This is truly a dream project; new sustainable homes in a fantastic location with both buses, subway and the bay close to the new homes. Danderyd needs more homes and these homes on Invernesshöjden are really welcome."

Sara Albrecht, Head of Department NCC Bostad Stockholm says:

"I would like to thank Besqab for the trust they have placed in NCC by giving us the responsibility for the contract for this excellent project, which, when it is ready in 2026, means that we have collaborated here for close to 10 years. It's nice to have a client with high ambitions, which has allowed us to make significant progress in developing both our companies' sustainability work."
